The Basic Secondary School is a part of the national education system that is constitutionally mandatory. It comes after the elementary education and it is followed by the upper secondary education (pre-university, technical and professional education or pedagogical school) includes the seventh, the eighth and the ninth grades.

The seventh grade is the beginning of the new teaching, where the contents of the previous level are systematised and new ones are introduced. During the two other years, new subjects are studied and the students get prepared for the pre-university or technical education. At the end of the ninth grade, students decide their continuity of studies for the acquisition of a profession depending on their social needs, interests and real possibilities.

The secondary education aims at the basic and integral formation of the Cuban adolescent, based on a general culture that allows him to be fully identified with his nationality and patriotism. Knowing and understanding your past will allow you to face your present and future preparation, in order to consciously adopt the option of socialism, which guarantees the defense of social conquests and the continuity of the work of the revolution, either in their ways of feeling, thinking and acting.
